FIRST LIST OF NOMINATIONS PUBLISHED

MANY LADIES TO PUT OVER BIG DRIVE

An even Start With Votes Made in The Express Great Circulation Drive.—List to Appear Again Next Week With Many Additional Votes Added.—Large Numbers of Votes Being Sent In.—Most of the Ladies Receiving a Good Support.

Surrounding Territory Well Represented

The Drive is Proving a Popular One.—Much Interest is Already Being Manifested Throughout This Section.—Free Voting Coupon, Good for 10,000 Votes This Week.—Save Every Coupon. Vote For Some One, the Most Votes Win, And Not The Most Money.—Big Vote Offered for Payment of Subscriptions This Week.

The first list of the names and addresses of the ladies who have been selected to put over the big circulation drive for The Napanee Express is published in this issue and is without a doubt the greatest number of prominent ladies ever before named to carry on a newspaper circulation campaign, and is proving a most popular scheme for producing an unparalleled interest, both with the readers, and the ladies who have been nominated. The votes to be cast by the readers of the paper is the popular feature, and the Free Voting Coupon in this paper is good for 10,000 votes and can be voted for any one in the list, or a new nomination can be made and added to the list. There is no limit to the number of Free Voting Coupons that can be given to any one of the ladies. Every Coupon should be saved for they are too valuable to allow to go to waste. The most votes win the awards. Every one taking an active part in the drive will receive a prize or cash award.

Of course it is understood that many of the ladies may not take an active part in the drive but those who have investigated the plan and have understood how pleasant the task will be to secure the votes from neighbors and friends will allow their names to remain in the lists, and the most successful will be given the best awards. The vote will be greatly divided, and who can tell who may win in the new Overland car? The most votes win, and not the most money.

Large Extra Votes for Subscriptions.

The payment of a few subscriptions will also secure a big extra vote. For six dollars in paid-up subscriptions from subscribers who are in arrears, or from new subscribers will secure 500,000 extra votes, besides the regular vote. The regular vote is 40,000 for each one year subscription, and more if the same subscribers pay more than one year, as is shown in the Regular Vote Schedule published in the big announcement or another page of this paper. Do not confuse the idea that the extra votes are given for the first six dollars that might have been sent in, but every extant who so desires may get in the $6.00 and receive the big vote.

How Tire and Rubber sales are increased by Long Distance

Quotations from recent reports:

"We have increased our use of Long Distance 33-1/3% for the first six months of 1922."

"When travellers come in they leave a list of customers they will be unable to call on the following week, and these are called by Long Distance from the Branch Office."

"At each Branch we have one man who does nothing but sell over the telephone."

"One of our staff is allotted to take Long Distance orders at his home after business hours, so as to secure the reduced rate for night service."

"We often call up customers by Long Distance between salesmen's visits."

We can tell you how to apply Long Distance to almost any business

Stories of Robert Barr.

Those who remember Robert Barr, the Canadian novelist, either by personal appearance or photograph, will picture a rather dour personage. The sparkling dialogue of his stories put him in a different light, and that is now confirmed by a couple of stories in "Memoirs of a Clubman," by G. B. Burgin, recently published in England. Burgin and Barr were walking together down the Strand when Barr "began to look annoyed." "There's a man with waxed moustache, silver-headed cane, and a swagger," he said, "who generally comes along at this hour, strutting in the middle of the pavement and looking not only as if he owned the earth, but expected everyone else to get off it." As chance would save it, the individual in question came along at the moment. Barr stopped in front of him. The man ceased twirling his stick and stopped in front of Barr. "Say," said Barr, with an intimidating drawl, "are you anybody in particular?" The man handed his card to Barr. "I'm Somerset Sausage. Out of the way, fellerl" he said, loftily, walked round Barr, and twirled himself off.

Robert Barr was once traveling in France with his wife in a non-smoking carriage, when two brawny Huns, each smoking a huge pipe, got into the carriage. Explaining that it was not a smoking carriage and that Mrs. Barr objected to smoking, Barr promptly bundled them out again. At the first stopping place, when the Huns were strolling up and down the platform, they saw Barr smoking a huge cigar in the same carriage. "You to us tell," one of them sputtered, "this a smoking carriage not is, and you yourself smokes when the lady the smoke not wishes. 'Ah, but, you see,' replied Barr, 'she's my wife and can't help herself'."

Thrushless America.

Curiously enough, there are no nightingales and no English song thrushes in America. Mr. Lee S. Crandall, Curator of Birds to the New York Zoological Gardens, says that English birds adapt themselves to civilization much better than American. Houses and towns do not seem to frighten American native birds away, and many species are becoming very scarce. Intensive forestry and wise supervision (such experiments up wonders in trees) are other factors in the disappearance of American birds, for those deprive them of the favorite places where they used to nest. "In England," says Mr. Lee Crandall, "your birds have had 1,000 years of civilization and have got used to it. Then you get changes of habit among your birds, such as when the wood pigeons invaded your towns and parks and when your seagulls came to London. In the United States the birds do not seem able to change their habits or to live with man to the same extent as they are accustomed to do in England."

Some people grow with responsibility; others swell.

THE CARE OF THE FEEBLE-MINDED

The havoc wrought by the non-care of the mentally deficient is terrible and is coming to be widely known. They are the cause of half the crime in general, two-thirds of prostitution in particular, two-fifths of venereal disease, and a large proportion of illegitimacy and of sexual vice.

The cost of caring for the fruits of this havoc in maintaining courts, gaols, prisons, reformatories, industrial farms, and rescue homes is a heavy burden on the taxpayers and on private charity.

Prevention is always more worth while than cure even where cure is possible, and feeblemindedness cannot be cured, though in time it can be prevented.

Let us consider first what to do with mentally defective children of school age.

They cannot be trained in the same classes with normal children. They lag behind, become discouraged, and get no benefit themselves. They retard the normal children. They become a nuisance to the teacher taking far more than their share of attention and all to little purpose. They are the source or occasion also of demoralizing school discipline, and usually also of abominable lewdness and vice among the other children.

What then is to be done - In cities and other large school districts there is no serious difficulty. They should be examined and tested by a capable doctor who has had special training in dealing in mental disease and deficiency, and sorted out into classes that may be called "special" or "industrial" or "auxiliary" by way of human camouflage. There should not be more than about fifteen in one class or room. The teachers of these classes require special training of course, the teaching has to be concrete, to a large extent manual, and more or less of the Kindergarten type.

Such classes are popular with the children. They solve the problem of truancy. Many of the normal children are pleased to be allowed to attend. Vancouver deserves the credit of having established these classes in a systematic way. When the writer last heard they had some two dozen of them. Many of the children mentally below par can, in these classes, get training enough to enable them to be self-supporting.

But this method cannot meet the need of such children in the country, and in smaller centres. For these special provision must be made in one or more Provincial schools established for this purpose.

The Child Welfare Department of the Province should have power to discover, examine and arrange for the specialized training and permanent care of mental defectives. Manitoba's new and constructive Child Welfare laws gives such authority and provides the necessary machinery: a Director of Child Welfare, a specially trained medical examiner, and a Board of Selection and determine what is to be done with each child.

A plan of this kind systematically and well worked for a generation will enormously reduce, if not eliminate, the problem of feeblemindedness.

Second, the adults also should be discovered, examined, and the worst of them segregated and so prevented from multiplying their kind.

On industrial farms they can be self-sustaining. The large home at Waverley, Mass., with 2000 inmates, is practically so. And the inmates of both sexes and all ages are happy and contented, and though neither walled nor bolted in, never run away. The Spring City, Penn., one with 1000 inmates is altogether self-sustaining. So are many others.

Every Canadian Province should have at least one such institution, one or more.

Leif Ericsson.

Leif Ericsson, a Norseman, led an expedition from Greenland probably to the shores of Canada, about 1,000 A. D. John Cabot (English) visited Canada in 1497. In 1534 a Frenchman Jacques Cartier, entered the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and the following year sailed up as far as the present site of Montreal. In 1603, Champlain, a Frenchman, sailed up the St. Lawrence. The next year he was on the Bay of Fundy, and participated in the founding of the first permanent French colony in North America—Port Royal (now Annapolis), Nova Scotia. In 1608 Champlain founded Quebec. From this time until he died, in 1635, Champlain worked incessantly to hold Canada as a French colony.

FARMERS' REQUIREMENTS

THE business and banking requirements of farmers are many and various. This Bank, because of its close contact with farmers, has learned through practical experience how to serve them in a definite and satisfactory manner.

It has co-operated with them when they had to purchase land, seed, stock, and implements and has helped them to save and to maintain their finances in an orderly manner. Our branch manager will be pleased to have you consult with him.

STORY OF T. C. NORRIS.

How Manitoba Leader Defeated More Clever Man.

Let all would-be politicians consider the career of Hon. T. C. Norris, of Manitoba, and be wise.

The story goes of one famous senator that after completing a fervid oration he turns to friendly newspapermen with anxious concern to ask: "Did I make a big fool of myself?" Many a Canadian politician rants with the same confidence but without admitting the same inner trembling. Tobias Crawford Norris is too sensible a person to scrape the clouds while cobbling at the knees. Perhaps he remembers the rock whence he was hewn and the persons who did the hewing.

Hon. T. C. Norris was born of Irish parentage near Brampton, Ont., and served his political apprenticeship in Peel and Halton counties. Then he farmed at Griswold, near Brandon, in Sir Clifford Sifton's old constituency and learned some "inside stuff" that only a Sifton or a Rogers could teach. Manitoba of a quarter of a century ago was a great training ground for those who prefer giving away long smokes to making long speeches.

Norris learned to speak in a very practical school—as auctioneer. The taciturn knight of the hammer is as rare as the loquacious Prospector. Norris learned how to sell good cattle at better prices to his fellow-farmers. Then he learned how to sell candidacies to them and entered the Legislature. But he was still not a cabinet timber, although well liked. The Liberals were then very much in opposition and Edward Brown was considered their ablest man.

Now Edward Brown was so able that he thought it wise to let the leadership go to somebody else rather than to thrust himself in when some feared him. Norris he considered a good stop-gap until the Promised Land of Power was nearer. Brown believed that the darkest hour would be just before the dawn. Brown would be the first of the host to see the dawn and, when all were gloomy at the long delay of the sunrise he would bravely take over the command from the useful Norris and would be premier.

It looked like clever politics and Hon. Robert Rogers is said to have commented often on its subtlety. But Norris got settled into the leadership, his following began to get used to him and the dawn broke unexpectedly. Long before the oppositionists thought of ousting the weak Norris for the strong Brown, there developed the great Parliament Buildings affair which sent Hon. Robert Rogers to Ottawa. Hon. Edward Brown to the provincial treasury and Hon. T. C. Norris to the premiership.

The suave Mr. Brown cheered lustily and beautifully for the new premier. Having overreached himself, according to the opinion of the wise ones, Edward Brown had the interesting experience of serving under Tobias C. Norris throughout the administration. Thus do simple men overcome clever men even in politics. Edward may be clever but Tobias is shrewd and it is often an over-refinement on finesse to wave office away in the hope of taking it at a more convenient season. This is the political lesson which may or may not be drawn from one account of the by-play of motives which have underlain the surface politics of Manitoba since the defeat of Roblin.

So far as statesmanship is concerned the future of Hon. T. C. Norris is in his past. He never was a great tribune of the people, much less was he the champion of great principles. His enemies made mistakes and he was sensible enough to profit thereby. His able friend made a slight miscalculation of the courses of the political star and the auctioneer of Griswold seized the psychological moment to shout "Gone" and close the deal for the party leadership.

As an administrator the first Liberal Premier of Manitoba since Greenway days was mediocre. As leader of the Opposition he showed little. Conditions made him and they have unmade him. The only flash he ever showed was in accepting the leadership that came his way. Some salesmen are poor bargain hunters, but this auctioneer knew when to bid. In opposition again, what would he have to offer?

OUR DOLLAR AT PAR.

Some of the Influences That Caused the "Come-back."

Mr. H. B. Walker of the Canadian Bank of Commerce remarks that Canada is the first of the countries that fought in the war and suffered currency depreciation to get back to normal. It is a significant and encouraging fact, and is explained by a number of leading Canadian bankers. The president of the Bankers' Association, Sir Frederic W. Taylor, reminds us that it is not the balance of trade alone that has brought the Canadian dollar back to par. The influx of "extraneous money" has played a part. It is estimated that United States investments and purchases in Canada total about $26,000,000 a month. The general manager of the Royal Bank, Mr. E. L. Pease, directs attention to other factors, such as the tourist traffic, the decline of Canadian purchases across the line, and the policy of American manufacturers, especially in the automotive industry, in making Canada an export centre for distribution to other parts of the British Empire. Wheat sold in Europe is also financed through New York, and this provides Canadian funds in the American market.

These explanations have a special interest because of the certain adoption of the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Bill. The measure will further discourage Canadian exports to the United States, already reduced greatly by the present Emergency Tariff, which has been in force more than a year. One result will be to transfer Canadian purchases from the United States to Europe, but even if the balance of trade between Canada and her neighbor inclines more sharply against this country the inflow of American capital for investment will tend, as now, to support the Canadian dollar, and Canadian credits in Europe for the shipment of farm products will continue to be used, as now, for balancing our accounts with the United States. The necessity of large coal purchases across the line makes the present parity of exchange fortunate for Canadian coal consumers, a far more numerous body than Canadian producers who would profit by a premium on New York funds.

Twin brothers with identical qualifications have just joined the teaching staff of the London Collegiate Institute after having been engaged for many years as pedagogues in schools far apart. The twins are Walter E. Shales and William E. Shales, and they have been teaching separately for a sufficient length of time to develop distinguishing characteristics. Otherwise the students at London might have some difficulty because the brothers are to teach the same subject, science.

The Shales brothers attended public and high school together and entered Queen's University at the same time. They graduated together four years later and both became specialists in science. Then they went to teaching, but because of the very fact that their training was the same they were forced to take schools far apart in order to teach the work in which they had specialized. Walter became principal of Hawkesbury High School. William taught at Smith's Falls, and at one time was principal for five years at Ingersoll Collegiate.

Each of the Shales brothers holds the degrees of B.A. and B. Paed.

A WOMAN'S WORK IS NEVER DONE

It Seems So in Many Cases and Good Health is Always Necessary

Viscount, Saskatchewan.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness of the female organs. I had pains in the back and bearing-down pains in the abdomen and was in a general run-down condition. I could not sleep, rest or work and was quite unfit to do even slight household tasks. A friend told me about your Vegetable Compound and I in my turn truly recommend it, as my severe symptoms vanished and I am better in every way. I do my own work, look after my children and see to chickens, cow and my garden. I also recommend it for young girls who are weak and run down, as my 16-year-old daughter has taken it and is quite her own gay self again."—Mrs. Fred Wiley, Viscount, Saskatchewan.

I Live On A Farm

Upper New Horton, N. B.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines and they have done me a world of good. Since then I have been able to do my housework and I have a lot of work to do as I live on a farm. Seeing your advertisement in the papers was what made me think of writing to you. I hope this will help someone else."—Mrs. Wm. B. Kerr, Upper New Horton, New Brunswick.

The New Chateauguay Monument.

Ottawa, Ont.—It has been decided by the Department of the Interior to erect a monument and tablet on the site of the old blockhouse near Chateauguay, Quebec, one and one-half miles distance from the existing Chateauguay river, commemorating the use of the site in the stirring days of the war of 1812-14. Though the blockhouse was not erected till after the battle of Chateauguay in 1813, there is evidence that it was prepared for the same period of defence and was garrisoned in the fall of 1815 by a company under Captain Christie, the future historian, and was an important seat of disturbance in the Rebellion of 1838.

Only a Youth, but Never Knew a Boyhood

George Adams is a very weak boy —boy no, weak he can't even turn the pages of a book without feeling pain. He has a good many brothers and sisters and his parents are very poor. But when George put on long trousers—he was just 15 at the time—he became a man and took upon himself the task of earning money for the family.

He went to learn a trade in an iron foundry, where fumes and hard work undermined a weak system and laid future trouble. Now and then one other working member of the family would cause carning through sickness or loss of job, and George would have to keep his nose to the grindstone a few more hours each day to make up for it. His life was just work, work, until one day he dropped on the floor. The company physician, who examined him, prescribed a year or two at the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives. He could understand why he never had a boy-hood and none of the good things of life, but he's fairly happy—he knows separation from his family safeguards them. He's sixteen, and he still has hope.

There are many just such deserving cases in need of treatment at the Muskoka Hospital. Will you lend a hand.

Mrs. Nelles Says She Owes Her Life To It

"I firmly believe I owe my life to Tanlac for it has completely restored my health after suffering for twenty-five years," was the remarkable statement made by Mrs. S. Nelles, of 208 Parliament St., Toronto, Ont.

"During all those years I hardly knew what it was to eat a good meal without suffering dreadful pains in the pit of my stomach and also palpitation of the heart afterwards. My liver was badly out of order and I was troubled a lot with nausea. I generally woke up mornings with a fearful headache and had such spells of dizziness that I had to hold on to the furniture to keep from falling. I was just tired out and weary all the time and every now and then had such a sinking sensation that I thought my end had come. In fact, I was almost a confirmed invalid, and never expected to be well again.

"But the way Tanlac has built me up has been really wonderful. After taking eight bottles I can honestly say I am as well as I ever was in my life. I have recommended Tanlac to lots of my friends, and am glad of this opportunity of telling everybody what a grand medicine it is."

Tanlac is sold by all druggists.

A Business Killed by Prohibition

A Sufferer Tells His Story.

The following letter appeared recently in the San Francisco "Examiner."

Editor "Examiner":

Sir,—What has prohibition accomplished to date? Here are facts not generally known.

I am President of sixty-five Neal Institutes for the treatment of the Liquor Habit, that were located in the principal cities of the United States and Canada.

During the twelve years before the Volstead Act became effective we treated more than 125,000 drinking men and women. Chicago and Cleveland Institutes treated more than 100 patients a month. Los Angeles and San Francisco averaged twenty-five to thirty a month. Neal Institutes have now all closed from lack of patronage, and I am giving all my time to another business.

Sincerely,

B. G. NEAL, M.D.

A Jolly Surprise.

A surprise party was held at the home of K. N. Storms, Wilton, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 31st, in honor of Mr. Storms' birthday. The guests all in fancy dress made a jolly appearance. The evening was spent in music and a late hour a delicious supper was served. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. A. Asselstine, Moscow; Mr. and Mrs. B. Purdy, Murvale, Mr. and Mrs. R. Gibson, Colverdale; Mr. and Mrs. E. Day, Mr. and Mrs. J. Shibley, Harrowsmith; Mr. and Mrs. Clare Amey, Mr. and Mrs. H. Guess and Mr. and Mrs. F. Grant, Sydenham.

Masonic "At Home."

The Masonic Union Lodge No. 9 held an "At Home" in their rooms on Tuesday evening of last week. Supper was served at 9.15 after which an excellent programme was given, the principal artists being the Irwin Bros., of Toronto, who were accompanied by a Toronto pianist. Short addresses were given by Bros. W. S. Herrington, Rev. A. J. Terrill and G. W. Morden. After the programme had been concluded the young people members indulged in a dance. Walters' orchestra supplied the music. A large number of members and friends attended and spent an enjoyable evening.

A Very Sudden Death.

The many friends of Miss Gladys Trumpour were shocked to hear of her sudden death in a Toronto hospital on Saturday. About a week ago Miss Trumpour went to Toronto to attend the funeral of her brother-in-law, and while there had a bad spell. Medical attention was secured and she was advised that an operation was necessary. The operation was performed on Wednesday and apparently successful, and the news on Saturday afternoon that she was dead came as a shock over the town. Miss Trumpour was a former resident of Adolphustown and came to Napanee with her mother several years ago, and during her residence in Napanee endeared herself to a very large circle of friends, especially among the younger people.

Cars Collide.

On Sunday afternoon at the corner of Dundas and West streets, was the scene of another car accident. An Overland car, driven by Mr. Thos. Bartlett, of Belleville, and with which Miss Felicia Huffman, Napanee, collided with a Ford car making the turn from West street onto Dundas street. The Ford car was hit on the rear wheel, skidded around and upset on the north side of the street. In the Ford car were Mr. Lyman and Mr. Johnston, both of Croydon. Mr. Lyman was cut about the head and shoulders, and received medical attention as also to be around. Mr. Johnston was not so fortunate as he received a broken collar bone. Both men were pretty well shaken up. The Ford car had a rear wheel smashed, fenders buckled, and the top and windshield wrecked. The Overland car was somewhat damaged in front with axle and connecting rods buckled.

Thursday Night at The Strand.

This announcement is an exact copy taken from "The Mail & Empire of Toronto, on November 7th:—

"Women's Greatest Sin," which strongly flavors of the problem play, drew huge holiday crowds to the Grand Opera House yesterday, and will no doubt be a big attraction for the remainder of the week. It is a mixture of elements of melodrama and romance, with not a little of the humorous side worked in. The plot may not be a strong one, but in the hands of a hard working band of players interest is sustained throughout. Domestic infelicities and unfaithfulness are, as the title would imply, conspicuous features, and the expensive experience invariably derived from indiscretions or light regard for the straight and narrow path is well thrust home. Anna Wakefield is portrayed by Madeline George. Originally a writer of fiction she was led to the belief that "nothing but money counts," but after passing through many trials and ills she has occasion to change her attitude. Madge Christie, as Dolly Banks, is a comfortable little actress who makes the most of a difficult role. She shines in quite a variety of difficult phases. Swanie Taylor, impersonating a servant, keeps the audience in good terms with her humor and talkativeness. Joseph Ferguson and Charlie Caulkins get through a lot of work. The play is in prologue and epilogue, and is well staged."

See this thrilling play at the Strand Theatre, Thursday night only, November 16th. A Trans Canada Theatre attraction.

ZENDER—DAVIS

A very pretty and interesting wedding was solemnized on Monday, November 6th, 1922, at the Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue, Westmount, when Miss Minnie Davis, daughter of Mr. and the late Mrs. W. Davis, of Napanee, Ont., formerly of Nottingham, England, was given in marriage to Mr. Victor Zender, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Zender, of Montreal, formerly of London, England. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Abramovitz, assisted by Rabbis Segal & Cohen. Miss Frieda Wisenberg, cousin of the bride, acted as maid-of-honor. Mr. Jack Zender, a brother of the groom, acted as best man. The bride wore an imported Persian gown of dark brown silk and overdress of delicate brocaded velvet on chiffon, with a picture hat to match, trimmed with ostrich plumes. Her shoes and stockings were also of the same shade, and she carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. Miss Frieda Wisenberg, maid-of-honor, also wore an imported Parisian gown, made of Royal navy blue Panne velvet with picture hat to match, trimmed with ostrich plumes, and shoes and stockings to match. She carried a bouquet of Premier roses. Mrs. Henry Zender, mother of the groom, wore a black Charmeuse satin gown trimmed with sterling silver beads, a black velvet hat and shoes of black satin with rhinestone buckles. A corsage of pink and white roses completed her attire. The gift of the groom to the bride was a diamond pendant. The groom's souvenir to the maid-of-honor was a diamond brooch. After the ceremony a very sumptuous dinner was served at the Queen Alexandra Ballroom, Square, where a delightful speech was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Abramovitz, and various others present. The guests were immediate relatives and intimate friends of the bridal couple. Mr. and Mrs. Victor Zender left on their honeymoon for an extended trip to New York and Atlantic City. Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Wisenberg, Mr. S. Wiesenberg, Miss F. Wisenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Fertig, Mr. and Mrs. Himmel and family, all of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Beckman, Atlantic City; Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Davidow, Buffalo, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. P. Phillips, London, Eng.; Mr. and Mrs. V. Goldberg, London, Eng.; Mr. and Mrs. J. Goldberg, London, Eng.; Mr. and Mrs. A. Bliss, Birmingham, Eng.; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fitzpatrick, Napanee, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Susman, Kingston, Ont.; Mrs. H. Robinson and son, Toronto, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. W. Armstrong, Ottawa, and Mrs. A. Meyers, of Florida.

KILLED WHILE FIXING TIRE.

Man Was Struck In Back by Another Car.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Nov. 12.—Struck by an approaching automobile while jacking up a rear wheel of his car, George Lintner, a former resident of Toronto, was instantly killed shortly after seven o'clock Sunday evening, about a mile and a half west of Aylmer, on the St. Thomas-Aylmer Highway. The automobile which struck Mr. Lintner, is said to have been driven by Claire Kincaide, of London, who is at present employed in St. Thomas.

According to reports, Mr. Lintner, together with two young ladies and another young man, was driving to Aylmer, but was forced to stop about a mile from the town because of tire trouble. Mr. Lintner got out to jack up the rear wheel and standing behind the car he evidently observed the red tail light. A car with powerful headlights approached from the east and Mr. Kincaide, driving towards Aylmer, took to the right hand side of the road, and, according to reports, in the glare of the approaching lights he did not see Mr. Lintner's car.

The three occupants of Mr. Lintner's car were not hurt in the collision.

Mr. Lintner's home is reported to be near Toronto, but he has been working near Aylmer lately.

COULD NOT CALL AID.

Man Sat Dying In Car While Crowds Passed By.

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—Taken suddenly ill with heart trouble and unable to do anything to attract attention, Abraham Lipson, aged 35, of Lauder avenue, Toronto, sat in a dying state for half an hour Saturday afternoon in an open automobile parked on Sparks street, without any of the hundreds of pedestrians or automobile drivers realizing his perilous condition. He was afterward removed to St. Luke's Hospital, where he succumbed.

He died after lunch went to meet his brother, Meyer Lipson, manager of the Nu Vogue Limited store on Sparks street, at 2.45 p.m. Meyer looked for his brother for more than half an hour, and finally went outside to see what delayed his brother. He found him sitting in his car in a dying state for lack an hour Saturday afternoon in an open automobile parked on Sparks street, without any of the hundreds of pedestrians or automobile drivers realizing his perilous condition. He was afterward removed to St. Luke's Hospital, where he succumbed.

Had Narrow Escape.

OSHAWA, Ont., Nov. 13.—Three Americans, Joseph Lynch, Chicago, Henry Westerley, Chicago, and J. E. Clatworthy of New York, had a miraculous escape early Sunday morning at the foot of the hill at Tooley's Mill, three miles east of Oshawa, on the Kingston road. Mr. Lynch was driving a large car, and was returning to Toronto from Peterboro when approaching the bridge which was hidden by a sharp turn in the road, the driver apparently did not notice the curve until close to the steel railing which protects traffic from a forty-foot drop to the ravine below.

The car was so close to the railing that the driver could not avoid striking it, and the car plunged through the railing and hung suspended half over the ravine. Several steel uprights were bent over like pins and it is miraculous that the big machine did not crash the rest of the way over the bridge. Fortunately none of the occupants were seriously injured, although Lynch was badly cut by flying glass. This is the fourth accident of a similar nature that has occurred in less than two weeks.

Reds see way to world revolution, only through Germany.

The annual report of Kingston general hospital shows a small deficit of $2,039 for the year, a very satisfactory statement.

NEW LEADER ELECTED

Robert Forke Is Chief of the Progressives.

Farmers' Party Has Decided to Broaden Out, But Members Are Unalterably Opposed to Fusion With the Liberals—Brandon M.P. to Guide Course of Group in the House of Commons.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 13.—The policy of "broadening out" had its way in the caucus of Progressive parliamentarians, which was concluded here Saturday night with the election of Robert Forke as leader, to succeed Hon. T. A. Crerar, and with the adoption of an expression of opinion that the Progressive movement "is big enough to include men and women of common ideals from all walks of life and that steps should be taken whereby practical expression can be given to these ideals."

Mr. Forke, member for Brandon, and sitting in the House of Commons for his first term, is described as a "moderate." He was elected over J. T. Shaw, of Calgary, in a secret ballot after R. A. Hoey, of Springfield, had positively declined the nomination. The vote was not announced, but it is said that the support for Mr. Shaw, who was not in the caucus at the time, was limited to his Alberta colleagues.

Mr. Shaw had told his friends that he was not a candidate for the leadership and had he been present at the time probably would have withdrawn his name.

The official report of proceedings does not mention the leadership balloting, except to say that Mr. Forke's election was made unanimous." Mr. Hoey, it is reported unofficially, is declining the nomination for himself, made a strong appeal for the selection of A. R. McMaster, Liberal member for Drummond, Que., declaring that Mr. McMaster's political views were closely in line with the Progressive platform and that he would give the party sound and able leadership.

It is understood there was a vote on Mr. McMaster's name, in which Mr. Hoey's recommendation received a considerable minority support, principally from Manitoba members.

Objection to Mr. McMaster is said to have taken the ground that he was not a member of the Progressive party, and that the members would be without justification in going outside the party ranks for a chief.

Mr. Forke is specifically described as the "leader of the party," but it seemed to be tacitly understood that in reality he is House leader, with the assistance of a committee of eight members, two from Ontario and one from each of the other provinces having Progressive members, and that the whole question of leadership will be reviewed at the national convention, which, it is proposed to call next summer. Members were inclined to think that in such a convention Mr. McMaster might easily become a formidable contender for the position.

Mr. Forke, who said he accepted the responsibilities of leadership purely from a sense of duty, was assured of the support of the party including those from Alberta who voted against him.

"Unalterable" opposition to fusion or formal co-operation with the Liberal party was expressed unanimously and this was taken as ending the issue, and for all the rumors circulated by interested politicians and uninformed newspapers."

The divergence in views on organization between the Alberta members and representatives of other provinces seems to have been less pronounced than many people expected. There was objection from nine members, most of them from Alberta, to the proposal that immediate steps be taken to hold a conference of the provincial organizations with a view to creating "some Federal co-ordination agency," on the ground that organization was a matter for the constituencies and eventually a compromise was reached which permits members to lay before their "constituency executive or any organization that is proper, to the province concerned," the matter of a national Progressive association. This is expected to alleviate any fear that the elected members were acting arbitrarily in the formation of a national body. A committee on organization was appointed, consisting of Messrs. Forke, McConica, Halbert, and Caldwell.

New Leader's Career.

Robert Forke, member for Brandon constituency, whose first term in the House of Commons has been marked by his election as Progressive leader, has long been prominent in municipal affairs. For twenty years he was a reeve of Pipestone municipality, in which is situated the Forke farm, and a ten-year term as secretary-treasurer of the Union of Manitoba Municipalities, was recognized by his election as honorary president.

Mr. Forke was born in Scotland 62 years ago, and he has spent all of his adult years in Canada, many of them in Manitoba. He is married and has three children.

EARTHQUAKE IN CHILE

More Than One Thousand Persons Were Killed.

South American Republic Was Rocked From End to End, and Tidal Wave 100 Feet In Height Swept Over Coast Towns—Appalling Devastation Was Caused.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 13. — An earthquake of great magnitude and far-spread effect rocked Chile from end to end Saturday. It was accompanied by a tidal wave, and the combined force of the earth tremors and the sweep of the water did vast damage.

It is estimated that at least 3,000 are dead and many thousands are in distress, needing food and shelter.

The provinces of Antofagasta, Atacama and Coquimbo suffered most, the central points of the quake lying in the latter two provinces. Copiapo, in Atacama, has the largest casualty list, with about 100 killed and many seriously injured.

One hundred persons were drowned at Coquimbo, when a tidal wave coming after the earthquake, swept in with a great roar. The inhabitants were panic-stricken and ran to the hills. The advance of the sea was accompanied by electrical discharges. Two steamers were left high and dry when the waters receded. The docks and railway depots were destroyed. Great quantities of merchandise were scattered through the streets and along the water front. Coincident with the shocks the sky was illuminated by electric discharges, and fires broke out. After the first shocks, the sea receded for a considerable distance, and then swept back in an immense wave, extending from Coquimbo to La Serena, seven miles to the northeast, flooding the town and the whole coast line and doing much damage. The tidal wave added to the terrors of the people, many of whom cried out for aid. Again the sea receded for a distance of 300 yards beyond the low-tide mark; then seemed to gather force and swept in as an immense wave, estimated at 50 metres (164 feet) in height, which completely destroyed the Baquedano quarter. A number of big lighters were picked up like chips and carried beyond the railway bridge, which is five blocks from the low-tide mark.

Upwards of 100 persons were killed and many seriously wounded by the earthquake, which overturned many buildings in Copiapo, capital of the province of Atacama.

It was for a time feared that the city of Antofagasta had suffered a great disaster, but most of the damage done at that place was due to a tidal wave, which drove the people out of their homes over a considerable area. No report of loss of life has yet come from there.

Chanaral, in Atacama, has virtually been abandoned to the inhabitants, as most of the buildings were wrecked by the immense seas sweeping in when the earth shocks had ceased. The greater part of this town was destroyed.

Throughout the province of Coquimbo hundreds of houses were levelled, while the residents fled to the hills.

From the southern part of Chile come reports of severe shocks, but little damage.

Another earth shock was felt here at 4.45 o'clock Saturday afternoon. It was of ten seconds duration.

In addition to heavy casualties of dead and injured at Copiapo and Coquimbo, it was reported that 500 were killed at Vallenar and the surrounding district. Vallenar was virtually destroyed; and the survivors are in critical condition. It seems certain that there have been casualties in other towns and villages around Copiapo, to the south, concerning which no news is yet available.

Already twenty-four bodies have been recovered at Coquimbo, where it is known there are one hundred or more dead. At Serena a number were killed by falling houses.

It was earthquake and tidal waves combined that accounted for the loss of life in the provinces of Antofagasta, Atacama and Coquimbo. The movement of the ocean is described as phenomenal. There seems have been much scarring at the bottom of the Pacific that immense quantities of water were sucked through, causing a tremendous recession of the waters along the Chilean coast.

Several times the ocean swept outward and came back in the shape of a great wave, flooding the seaports and in some instances sweeping away the water front. The violent effects of the tidal wave were felt from Antofagasta on the North to Valdivia on the South, covering about 16 degrees of latitude, or more than 1,200 miles.

All types of craft lying in the various harbors were swept on shore, wrecked, or left high and dry, and at scores of small ports wharves and quays were destroyed. Chilean naval vessels in the harbor at Talcahuano, about 300 miles south of Valparaiso, when they felt the force of the shocks raised their cables and proceeded out to the open sea.

The STRANGE CASE of CAVENDISH

By RANDALL PARRISH

AUTHOR OF "THE DEVIL'S OWN," "MYLADY OF THE NORTH," ETC.

COPYRIGHT, BY RANDALL PARRISH

They settled down to the same monotony mile after mile. The way became rockier, with less sand, but with no more evidence of life. Far away ahead a strange buttress of rock rose into the sky resembling the turret of a huge castle. The sun was directly overhead when Moore turned his team suddenly to the left, and drove down a sharp declivity leading into a ravine.

"Drop the canvas, Joe," he said shortly, "there's only 'bout a mile more."

The passage was so narrow, and so diversified by sharp turns, that Miss Donovan, shut in behind the closed cover, could perceive little of its nature. The cliffs arose precipitously on either side, absolutely bare. To the left nothing could be seen but black rock, but on the other side an open space yawned, perhaps twenty feet across, its bottom imperceptible. The horses stumbled over the rough stones, held only by Moore's firm grip on the reins, and the light began to fade as they descended. At last nothing appeared above but a narrow strip of sky, and the glimmer of sun had totally vanished. Almost at the same moment the driver released the creaking brake, and at a trot the wagon swept forward between two pinnacles of rock, and came out into an open valley.

The transition was so sudden and startling as to cause the girl to give utterance to a cry of surprise. They were in a green, watered valley, a clear stream wandering here and there through its center, shadowed by groves of trees. This valley was nearly square, possibly extending not over a mile in either direction, merely a great hole trimmed by desert, a strange, hidden oasis rendered fertile and green by some outburst of fresh water from the rocks. Emerging upon it in the midst of the barren desolation through which they had been toiling for hours, blinded by alkali dust, it seemed like some beautiful dream, a fantasy of imagination.

Miss Donovan doubted the evidence of her own eyes, half convinced that she slept. It was Moore's voice which aroused her.

"Mendez must have got back, Joe," he said eagerly. "There are horses and cattle over yonder."

The other pushed up the canvas and looked out.

"That's right. The fellow is comin' now—see?"

He was loping along carelessly, Mexican from high hat to jingling spurs, sitting the saddle as though molded there, a young fellow, dark faced, but with a livid scar along one cheek.

"Juan Caterus, the little devil," muttered Sikes, as the rider drew nearer. "There's some pot brewing if he is in it."

The rider drew up his horse, and lifted his hat, his smiling lips revealing a row of white teeth.

"A pleasant day, senor," he said graciously, his dark eyes searching the faces of the two men, and then dwelling with interest on the woman. "Ah, your pardon, senorita; your presence is more than welcome here."

He rested one hand on the wagon box, the expression of his face hardening. "Yet an explanation might not be out of place—the Senor Mendez may not be pleased."

"We came under orders from Lacy," replied Moore confidently. "You have seen us both before."

"True, but not the lady; you will tell me about her?"

Sikes climbed down over the wheel. "It is like this, senor," he began. "Lacy did not know your party was here; he thought you were all south for another month yet. He would keep this girl quiet, out of the way for a time. She is from New York, and knows too much."

"From New York?" The quick eyes of the Mexican again sought her face. "She is to be held prisoner?"

"Yes, senor."

"Then I will ride with you to Mendez; 'tis well to have the matter promptly over with."

The wagon rumbled on, Moore urging the wearied team with whip and voice to little result. Sikes remained on foot, glad of the change, striding along in front, while the Mexican rode beside the wheel, his equipment flinging the sunlight flashing over his bright attire. He made a rather gallant figure, of which he was fully conscious, glancing frequently aside into the shadow beneath the canvas top to gain glimpse of its occupant. At last their eyes met, and he could no longer forbear speech, his English expression a bit precise.

"Pardon, senorita, I would be held your friend," he murmured, leaning closer. "You know Senor Mendez?"

She shook her head negatively.

"'Tis strange! Yet I forget you come from New York. They know him here on this border. If you ask them when they will tell you. Even Senor Lacy takes his orders from Pascual Mendez. He care not who he kill, who he fight—some day it come his turn, and then he liberate Mexico—see? The day is not yet, but it will come."

"But you, senor?"

"I am his lieutenant—Juan Caterus," and he bowed low, "and I ride now to tell him of his guest."

She watched him as he spurred forward, proud of his horsemanship, and making every effort to attract her attention. Moore turned in his seat, and grinned.

"Some tin soldier," he said sneeringly, "that's a feller I always wanted ter kick, an' some day I'm a goin' ter do it."

The wagon lurched down a steep bank, splashed its way across the narrow stream and up the other side; the horses striding in their harness to the sharp snap of the driver's whip. A towering precipice of rock confronted them, and at its very foot stood two cabins of log construction, so closely resembling their stone background as to be almost imperceptible at the distance of a few yards. Sikes leaned on his rifle waiting, and as Moore halted the panting team and leaped over the wheel to the ground Cateras came forth from one of the open doors and crossed the intervening space on foot. He was smoking a cigarette, the blue wreath of smoke circling above his head in the still air.

"The lady is to be placed in my care," he said almost insolently. "Your hand, senorita."

Miss Donovan hesitated. Moore broke the silence with a protest.

"In your care, senor? The girl is here as prisoner to Bill Lacy."

"So I told Mendez," he said indifferently. "But he is in ill humor this morning and took small interest in the affair. It was only when I promised to take full charge that he consented to your remaining at all."

"If there is evil done, the debt will be paid."

Cateras laughed, one hand at his incipient mustache.

"Billy Lacy, you mean, no doubt. That is a matter for him to settle with Mendez. It is not my affair, for I only obey my chief. However, senors, 'tis no evil that is contemplated, only we prefer guarding the secrets of this valley ourselves. That is what angers Mendez, the fact that Lacy uses this rendezvous as a prison during our absence. We found one here when we returned—guarded by an American. Now you come with another. How do we know what may result from such acts? What sheriff's posse may be on your trail? Bill Lacy! Dios! if Bill Lacy would make prisoners, let him keep them somewhere else than here. Mendez takes no prisoners—he knows a better way than doing things like that."

"But, senor, this is a woman."

"Of which I am well aware," bowing gallantly. "Otherwise I should not have interfered and offered my services. You know what to do with your team; then the both of you report to Caseas at the upper camp—you know him?"

"Yes, senor."

"Tell him I sent you. He will have his orders; they are that you be shot if you attempt to leave before Mendez gives the word. 'Tis not long now till we learn who is chief here—Bill Lacy or Pascual Mendez. Come, senorita, you are safe with me."

Concealing a dread that was almost overpowering, yet realizing the impossibility of resistance, Stella permitted him to touch her hand and assist her to clamber over the wheel. Under some conditions the change in captors might have been welcomed—certainly she felt no desire to remain in the hands of the two who had brought her there, for Sikes, plainly enough, was a mere drunken brute, and Moore, while of somewhat finer fiber, lacked the courage and manhood to ever develop into a true friend.

Yet she would have infinitely preferred such as these—men, at least, of her own race—to this smirking Mexican, hiding his devilish instincts behind a pretense at gallantry. He had hastened ahead to Mendez; told a tale in his own way, rendering the chief's suspicions of Lacy more acute and thus gaining permission to assume full charge. Her only hope was to go herself into the presence of the leader and make a plea to him face to face. Cateras, smiling, pressed her arm with his fingers.

"This way, senorita."

"Wait," and her eyes met his, showing no sign of fear. "You take me, I presume, to Senor Mendez? I am an American woman, and you will yet pay dearly for this outrage, I demand an interview with the chief and refuse to go with you until it is granted."

"You refuse! Ha!" and he burst into laughter. "Why, what power have you got, you little fool? Do you know where you are? What fear do we have of your d—— Americanos. None!" and he snapped his fingers derisively. "We spit on the dogs. I will show you —come!"

He gripped her shoulder in his lean hand, his eyes glaring into her face savagely. The grasp hurt, and a sudden anger spurred her to action. With a quick twist she freed herself and, scarcely knowing how it was done, snatched the heavy driver's whip from Moore's hand. The next instant, before the astounded Mexican could even throw up his arm in defense, the infuriated girl struck, the stinging lash raising a red welt across the swarthy cheek. Cateras staggered back, his lips giving utterance to a curse.

Again she struck, but this time his fingers gripped the leather and tore it from her hands with sufficient force to send her to her knees. With a spring forward the man held her in his grasp, all tiger now, the pretense at gentleness forgotten. He jerked her to her feet with fingers clutching her neck mercilessly.

"Here Silva, Mercdes," he cried, "come take this spitfire. Caramba! We'll teach her."

Two men ran from between the huts and Cateras flung her, helpless from her choking, into their grasp.

"Take her within—no, there; the second door, you fools."

Breathless from effort, a mere child in their grip, Miss Donovan struggled vainly. They forced her through the door and Cateras, still cursing furiously, followed, the whip in his hands.

CHAPTER IX.

Westcott Finds Himself Alone.

It never occurred to Westcott on his escape through the darkness that his night's adventure would in any way endanger Miss Donovan. He was on the property of La Rosita Mining company upon his own account, and not in reference to the Cavendish case at all —or, at least, this last was merely incidental.

From where he lay he could see across the bare, rock-strewn hillside to the distant hut, outlined by the gleam of light within, and perceive the black silhouette of the shafthouse. He could dimly distinguish figures as they passed in and out of the glare of light, and was aware that Moore had been ordered to the Cavendish case at all —or, at least, this last was merely incidental.

"You refuse! Ha!" and he burst into laughter. "Why, what power have you got, you little fool? Do you know where you are? What fear do we have of your d—— Americanos. None!" and he snapped his fingers derisively. "We spit on the dogs. I will show you —come!"

He gripped her shoulder in his lean hand, his eyes glaring into her face savagely. The grasp hurt, and a sudden anger spurred her to action. With a quick twist she freed herself and, scarcely knowing how it was done, snatched the heavy driver's whip from Moore's hand. The next instant, before the astounded Mexican could even throw up his arm in defense, the infuriated girl struck, the stinging lash raising a red welt across the swarthy cheek. Cateras staggered back, his lips giving utterance to a curse.

Again she struck, but this time his fingers gripped the leather and tore it from her hands with sufficient force to send her to her knees. With a spring forward the man held her in his grasp, all tiger now, the pretense at gentleness forgotten. He jerked her to her

Evidently he considered the matter a huge joke, but Westcott snatched the paper from his fingers impatiently and eagerly read the few hastily penciled lines:

"Have received a message calling me East at once. Shall take the night train, and inclose sufficient money to pay for my entertainment.

"S. D."

He stared at the words, a deep crease between his eyes. It was a woman's handwriting, and at first glance there was nothing impossible in such an action on her part. Yet it was strange, if she had departed so suddenly without leaving any message for him. His eyes narrowed with aroused suspicion as he looked up from the slip of paper and confronted the amused Timmons across the desk.

"And that was all; was it—just this note and the cash? There was nothing addressed to me?"

The hotelkeeper shook his head.

"When did you see her last."

"'Bout nine o'clock, I reckon; she came down inter the dinin' room for a drink o' water."

"How much longer were you up?"

"Oh, maybe an hour."

"No message for Miss Donovan up to that time?"

"No."

"You left the door unlocked?"

"Sure; them New York fellers was both dressed, an' oughter waited till they come in, maybe, but I was plum' tired out."

"When did they come back?"

"Oh, 'bout midnight, I reckon. Bill Lacy an' Matt Moore was along with 'em."

"I see! And these New York people —they are still here?"

"They was all three down ter breakfast; ain't seen nuthin' of 'em since."

"What became of Lacy?"

"He's down in his saloon; he sed if you showed up, an' asked for him, ter tell yer that's what he'd be."

"He told you that? He expected me to show up, then?"

"I reckon as how he did," and Timmons grinned in drunken good humor. "He's pretty blame smart, Bill Lacy is; he most always knows what's goin' to happen." He leaned over the desk and lowered his voice. "If yer do hunt him up, Jim," he said confidentially, "you better go heeled."

Westcott laughed. The first shock of the discovery of Miss Donovan's disappearance had passed, and he was himself again. He must have time to think and arrange some plan and, above all, must retain a clear mind and proceed coolly.

"All right, old man," he said easily, "I'll try and look out for myself. I haven't eaten yet today. What can you find me in the larder?"

Although feeling the need of food, Westcott's chief desire in the dining-room of the Timmons' house more destrous of being alone than for any other purpose. He realized that he was suddenly brought face to face with a most serious condition, and one which must be solved unaided. So Bill Lacy expected him? Had left word where he was to be found? What was the probable meaning of this? Westcott did not connect this message directly with the strange disappearance of Miss Donovan. Moore must have recognized him during their fight, and reported to his master who it was that had been discovered listening at the window. Realizing the nature of that conversation, Lacy naturally anticipated being sought the very moment Westcott came to town. That was what this meant. All right, he would hunt Lacy as soon as he was ready to do so; and, if Timmons suggested, would go "heeled."

But the girl? What had really become of the girl? Westcott drew the brief note from his pocket, smoothed out its creases and read the few words over again. The writing was unquestionably feminine, and he could recall seeing nothing Miss Donovan had ever indited, with which it could be compared. But would she have departed, however hurriedly, without leaving him some message? Unconsciously he still held the letter in his hand when the waitress came in with his breakfast. She glanced about to see if certain they were alone and, leaned over, her lips close to his ear.

"Is that the note they say that New York young lady left?"

"Yes, Sadie," in surprise. "Why?"

"Well, she never wrote it, Mr. Westcott," hurriedly placing the dishes before him, "that's all. Now don't yer say a word to anybody that I told yer; but she didn't go East at all; she was took in a wagon down the desert road. I saw her take her."

"You saw them? Who?"

"Well, I don't just know that, 'cept it was Matt Moore's team, an' he was drivin' it. I didn't see the others so as to be sure. Yer see us help sleep over the kitchen, an' 'bout one o'clock I woke up. I thought I heard a noise outside, an' got up an' went to the winder, I couldn't see much, not 'nough so I could swear to nuthin'; but there was three or four men and there just across that little gully, you know, an' they had a woman with 'em. She didn't scream none, but she was tryin' ter git away; wunst she run, but they caught her. I didn't see no wagon then; it was behind the ridge, I reckon. After a while it drove off down the south trail, an' a little later three men come up them outside stairs back into the hotel. They was mighty still 'bout it, too."

"You couldn't tell who they were?"

"They wa'n't like nuthin' but shaders; it was a purty dark night. Say, did you ever hear tell of a Mexican named Mendez?"

"Well, rather; he's a cattle thief, or worse. Arizona has a big reward out for him, dead or alive."

"That's the gink. I bet yer; has he got a hangout anywhar 'round this country?"

"Not so far as I know. What makes you suspect this?"

Sadie leaned even closer, her voice trembling with excitement, evidently convinced that her information was of utmost importance.

"You know the feller they call Enright, I reckon he's a lawyer?"

Westcott nodded.

"Well, he was doin' most of the talkin' last night, an' doin' 'round the sideboard yonder, pretendin' ter clean it up. Nobody thought I was in ear distance, but I got hold ov a word now an' then. He kept tellin' 'em 'bout this Mexican, who's a friend of Bill Lacy, an' I judge has a place whar he hangs out with his gang somewhar in the big desert."

"Was anything said about Miss Donovan?"

"Not by name; they was too smart for that; but that was the direction Matt Moore drove off last night—there's Enright comin' downstairs now; won't yer hev' some more cakes, sir?"

Westcott pushed back his chair and rose to his feet. He had extracted all the information the girl possessed, and had no wish to expose her to suspicion. There was no longer a doubt in his mind as to the fate of Miss Donovan. She had been forcibly abducted by this gang of thieves, and put where her knowledge could do them no harm. But where? The clue had been given him, but before it could be of any value he must learn more of this Mexican, Mendez. The fellow had always appeared a rather mythical character, but now became suddenly real. The marshal might know; if not, then he must probe the truth out of Lacy. Determined to make the effort, he muttered a swift word of thanks to Sadie and left the room.

From the open doorway Westcott took careful survey of the street, adjusting his belt so that the butt of his revolver was more convenient to the hand. He had no conception that his coming interview with Lacy was to be altogether a pleasant one, and realized fully the danger confronting him.

At that moment the little marshal, his broad-brimmed hat cocked over one eye, emerged from the narrow alleyway between the Red Dog and the adjacent dance hall, and stood there dumbfully, his gaze wandering up and down the deserted street. As Westcott descended the hotel steps the marshal saw him, and came forward. His manner was prompt and businesslike.

"Hello, Jim," he said rather briskly. "Had a little trouble up your way last night, I hear."

"Nothing to bother you, Dan; my Mexican watchman was shot up through a window of the shack."

"Kill him?"

"Instantly. I told the coroner all about it. Whoever the fellow was I reckon he meant the shot for me, but poor Jose got it. Is this Bill Lacy this morning?"

The marshal's thin lips smiled grimly as his eyes lifted to Westcott's face.

"He's back there in his office. That's what I stopped yer for. He said he rather expected yer'd be along after a while. What's up between yer, Jim? There ain't goin' ter be no fight er nuthin'?" anxiously.

Westcott laughed.

"I don't see any use for any," he answered. "But Bill might be a bit touchy. Maybe, Dan, it might be worth while for you to hang around. Do as you please about that."

He turned away and went up the wooden steps to the door of the Red Dog. The marshal's eyes followed him solicitously until he disappeared within; then he slipped back into the alleyway skirting the side of the building until he reached a window near the rear.

Westcott closed the door behind him and took a swift view of the barroom. There were not many present at that hour—only a few habitual loafers playing cards. Westcott recognized most of the faces with a slight feeling of relief. Neither Enright nor Benton were present, and it was his desire to meet Lacy alone, away from the influence of these others. He crossed to the bar.

"Where's Bill?" he asked.

"Back there," and the dispenser of drinks inclined his head toward a door at the rear. "Go on in."

The fellow's manner was civil enough, yet Westcott's teeth set with a feeling that he was about to face an emergency. Yet there was no other way; he must make Lacy talk. He walked straight to the door, opened it, stepped into the room beyond, and turned the key in the lock, dropping it into his pocket. Then he faced about. He was not alone with Lacy; Enright

"What the H—— Does This Mean?" He Demanded Hotly.

sat beside the desk of the other and was staring at him in startled surprise. Westcott also had a hazy impression that there was or had been another person. The saloon keeper rose to his feet, nearly sobered completely on the ground by Westcott's unexpected appearance.

"What the h—— does this mean?" he demanded hotly. "Why did you lock the door?"

"Naturally, to keep you in here until I am through with you," returned the miner coldly. "Sit down, Lacy; we've got a few things to talk over. I supposed I would find you alone."

Lacy sank back into his chair, endeavoring to smile.

"This gentleman is a friend of mine," he explained. "Whatever you care to say can be said before him."

"I am quite well aware of that and also that he is now present so that you may use him as a witness in case anything goes wrong. This is once you have got in bad, Mr. Patrick Enright of New York."

WELCOME, WINTRY WINDS?

What did you do with your summer's dough?
It's gone; and you hate to tell.
Soon we'll have both hail and snow,
It sure would make one yell.
But I we should worry! let it some,
The wintry winds we'll greet,
For we were shod at the Hospital
And we shall have dry feet.
Hog! Dog! nor devil, do we fear,
For our understanding's good;
Our sox are dry, our feet are glad,
We did as wise fool's should.

Senior IV—Normile, Cowling, Coates, Sweet, Barrett, Harrison, Ballard, Carr, Huyck.

Mrs. W. J. Wiggins gave a tea in honor of Miss Jean Daly on Tuesday afternoon at her apartment on Dundas street. The bride-to-be was tastefully gowned in a grey canton crepe with just a touch of lip-stick red. A chic little black velvet hat completed the costume. When tea was served a conspicuously large "wedding cake" concealing a number of beautiful pieces of china, proved a delightful surprise for Miss Daly. The tea table was dainty in colors of pink and white, and the delicious refreshments were mostly of the same pretty shades. Many expressions of good wishes and affection were written on little cards attached to the surprise gifts, and were not the least of Miss Daly's pleasure in her friends thoughts for her.

DESERONTO.

The banquet on Monday evening, Thanksgiving day, in honor of the Deseronto and district returned men's club, was a great success. About forty gallant boys who served overseas, sat down to a splendid seven course dinner, served by the ladies in St. Vincent's Parish Hall, Green street. Major-General Macdonnell, commandant, R.M.C., Kingston, was one of the distinguished visitors. At the close of the banquet the party went to the "At Home" at Camp Summerside pavilion, where about 300 people had gathered to enjoy a splendid programme of dancing to the sweet strains of Trenser's orchestra, Kingston. Dainty refreshments were served at 11.30 and the merry makers enjoyed the dance until the "wee sma' hours," when they dispersed, wishing the returned men all good wishes, and hoping they will entertain again in the near future.

The weekly euchre and dance at the Parish Hall will be held on Thursday evening.

OUR FUR DEPARTMENT GREETS YOU WITH MANY PLEASING SURPRISES IN PRICES AS WELL AS STYLES. SABLE MAKES HANDSOME NECK PIECES

Possibly no other fur has been quite as fashionable, as popular, or as durable as "Sable." To-day furriers have different ideas of what constitutes a good piece of sable fur. To-day the particular fur manufacturer chooses only skins that are bred and raised in the state of New York. This fur is beautifully rich and glossy, it forcibly maintains sable's strong reputation for wear, and it combines nicely with other furs when used for trimmings.

We are showing several remarkably good styles in New York State Sables. Particularly fashionable are shapes in Cape, Shawl and Choker effects. Rich, durable linings also further enhance these pieces.

Prices range from $39.50 to $60.00.

A Robinson Guarantee goes with every sale.
